INTRODUCTION TO

VAN DIEN, VAN DINE, VAN DUYN & VERDUYN FAMILIES

The initial genealogical work on these families, as with so many others originating in Kings County, New York, was done by the late Teunis G. Bergen, first in his Early Settlers of Kings County, and some years later in Vol. X of the New York Genealogical & Biographical Record. In the latter he in general carried the family down through the first three generations. However, this work contained one serious defect in that it had the Van Dien family descending from the first Van Duyn ancestor, while later research has shown that the two progenitors were contemporaries rather than father and son. Also Dirck Gerretsz Van Dien was from Tricht in the County of Buren, while Gerret Cornelisz Van Duyn was from Nieuwkerk in Zeeland, two quite different locations.

Dirck Gerretsz Van Dien married the widow of the first Andreas Hopper, by whom he had only one son, which tended to make this family one generation late in branching out and hence much smaller than others which arrived at this time. He early moved to Bergen County, New Jersey, where his descendants continued to remain, particularly in the Paramus section, until well into the 19th Century.

Gerret Cornelisz Van Duyn apparently emigrated alone with a sister and after a brief sojourn in New Amsterdam, settled in New Utrecht. He is one of the few, however, who returned to Holland for some years before finally becoming established here. One line of his family became established in Queens County, another in Kings County, with a branch in Dutchess County, a third in Somerset County, N.J., and quite a large branch in Morris Co., N.J., which was completely overlooked by Bergen in his works. One member of the Queens County branch retired to Nova Scotia after the Revolution where some of his descendants presumably remain. Gerret, the progenitor, figured prominently in the account of the Labadists, Dankers and Sluyter, of their voyage to New York and travels in New Netherland in 1679.

Cornelis Verduyn was a late emigrant to New York sometime after the English conquest, which runs counter to the historical pattern of immigration. He married a lady of Dutch descent and had several daughters who married husbands of well-known New York families. After the record of birth of one Verduyn grandson the family seemed to disappear and presumably died out. Since some of the references seem to confuse him with his contemporary Cornelis Van Duyn (particularly those to "V. Duyn"), all were checked to eliminate any confusion. A secondary purpose was to see if any Verduyns changed to Van Duyn (as Verkerk became Van Kirk), but no evidence of this was found.

3 - RNA 4:11, or Teunis RNA 4:16 4 -

5 - Gerret was listed as a son by Bergen on the basis of a refer-

6 - ence which actually pertained to the father.

7 - Further research on this person show him to have been born at least by 1640 and probably earlier, hence he was a con-

8 - temporary of Gerret Cornelisz and could not have been his son in spite of the patronymic and the similar surnames

9 - each family eventually used. (see VAN DIEN, Section II)

10. They had three children: Gerret 1695, Thys 1708, and Jacomyntje Van Pelt. He d. before 1708 when she m. (2) Peter CORNELL of Newtown.
11. The account of the Labadists, Dankers and Sluyter (Journal of a Voyage to New York, 1679-80, [L.I. Hist. Soc. 1867]) contain some interesting passages as to Gerret and his family.

"Having then fortunately arrived, by the blessing of the Lord, before the city of New York, on Saturday, the 23d day of September, we stepped ashore about four o'clock in the afternoon, in company with Gerrit [Van Duyn], our fellow passenger, who would conduct us in this strange place. He lived here a long time and had married his wife here, although she and his children were living at present, at Zwolle [Holland]. We went along with him, but as he met many of his old acquaintances on the way, we were constantly stopped. He first took us to the house of one of his friends After taking a glass of Madeira, we proceeded on to Gerrit's father-in-law's, a very old man, half lame, and unable either to walk or stand, who fell upon the neck of his son-in-law, welcoming him with tears of joy. The old woman [Teuntje Teunis or Jacobs] was also very glad. This good man was born in Vlissingen, and was named Jacob Swart. He had been formerly a master carpenter at Amsterdam, but had lived in this country upwards of forty-five years.--pp. 109-10

"We went immediately to Saponkanikke [probably Saponkanikan, now Greenwich Village], where [Gerrit] was engaged in building, whom we wished to accompany us, because he knew several of those Indians and spoke their language, and because he had said all along that he wished to see the land of his brother-in-law, since Jacques [Cortelyou, husband of his sister Neeltje] had promised him as much of it as he would cultivate.--p. 160

"February 1st [1680], Wednesday. Gerrit, the son-in-law of our host, having been a long time upon Long Island, came over with a cask of tobacco, which he intended to ship in the ship Beaver; he repacked it, and I helped him cooper it. He said he had another one to bring over from the island, and then he would take Simon's boat and go with us to Ackquakenon [now Passaic, N.J.].--p. 261

"4th [March 1680] Monday It had rained, and we started at daylight to the boat, and rowed into the stream. Gerrit grumbled very much. He was a coarse, ignorant man, and had not well calculated the tide--p. 269 [It is also quite likely that by this time the Labadists realized that Gerret was unlikely to succumb to their religious persuasions.]

"16th [April 1680] Tuesday The old man [Jacob Swart] and his wife with whom we lodged had several children, the husband and wife each three by former marriages, and one between themselves. The husband's children by his former wife were two daughters and one son. One of the daughters was married to Gerrit [Van Duyn], the wheelwright, who had married her in New Netherland, but upon the first change in the government [1664], she left for Holland, and he followed her there after a little time, and kept house at Zwolle; but not being able after several years, to succeed very well in the Netherlands, he came back in the same ship with us, leaving his wife and children behind at Zwolle. Finding matters go on here to his wishes, he sent for his family by Captain Jacob, of the ship Beaver. This is Gerrit the wheelwright, or carpenter, whom we have mentioned several times . . . Another daughter [Swart] lived still at Amsterdam, for whom [Jacob] has given us several messages and a letter to take when we leave. His son is a carpenter in the East Indies. The old couple had one child between them, named Willem, now about twenty-three years old, a carpenter by trade, a little rough and coarse, but otherwise not an unjust kind of a person, according to the world. He lived at home with his parents where we lodged. He was somewhat wronged in his inheritance, as the old people acknowledged, and we reproved them for it. They promised amendment.--pp.286-7 [Both Jacob and his son Willem also seemed to have gone under the name of "Heliakers" (KCo.295)]

12. If Gerret and his sister Neeltje had emigrated unaccompanied by adults in 1649, it is likely that he was at least some ten years older. Neeltje, however, may have been considerably older than Gerret as she was married some seven years before him, her last child known was born about 1671 (placing her birth possibly as early as 1626), and therefore may have acted as his sponsor and guardian on the voyage over. Their mother is said to have been Machtelje Huyken, which seems likely since two of Gerret's sons married Huyken sisters (see Cortelyou Genealogy, 65-6, for a more complete account of Neeltje).

Martin is presumed to have been the father of Martin who named his first son & daughter Martin & Dorothy, respectively, after this couple. There were various real estate transactions between Martin and James in Morris County (B272-8) on June 1, 1790 which substantiate their relationship as brothers although this is nowhere so stated. Abraham fits into this family by his apparent age and the naming of his children.

CHILD OF Jacobus # 73 LIVED Somerset-Middlesex Cos.
 BORN 1779¹ DIED July 19, 1832²

The birth date cited is probably in error by about 10 years and perhaps should be 1769; note his wife was born in 1773. The name of his eldest daughter doubtless comes from his mother which distinguishes him from his cousin (#165). Jacobus (#22) named son Cornelius in his will dd. 16 Apr 1772 (NJA 34:542), and he may have been named for this uncle who appears to have died childless.⁵

CHILD OF [Martin #84] LIVED near Pompton, Morris Co.
BORN 19 Apr 1760 bp. Pompton DIED

The one baptismal record cited below is the one indication that this child of Martin survived infancy, hence this identification is extremely tenuous. It is possible he was the James who lived in Caldwell and is the one listed as "deceased" 1823-33 in the Fairfield RDC Account Book (GMNJ 25:7). As all baptismal records of the church have been lost, that would explain the lack of records of children.

William was a farmer in Montville.¹ Mr. Nelson in his History of Paterson (p. 373) states that William and his wife Elizabeth Doremus went West where she died, and he later returned to Paterson where he died. As there is some discrepancy in the children as given by Nelson and Lewis it is possible two different families are involved, although both agree as to the name of his wife.

On Nov. 7, 1804, John Vandign & Rachel, his wife, sold to his brother Abraham, both of Hanover Township, a fraction of an acre of land for $5 (Morris I:454). This is the basis for the presumption that John was an elder brother of this Abraham, in which case however, their father was probably born prior to 1747.
